"generally, medical sector costs were much higher than veterinary costs," write the study authors, "but I know anything is possible after learning how to walk again."